

Health and Power

critical analysis of mechanisms of social control in the field of health/disease

Thursday, August 12, 2021

Iatrocide: Microbial Theory kills and tramples on rights and freedoms

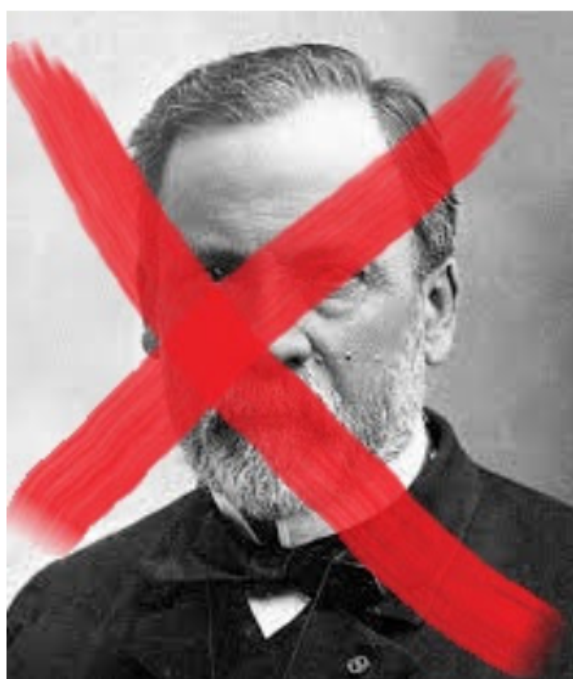

Jesus Garcia Blanca

The perversion of science: a false theory imposed by those in power is the pretext for violating fundamental rights and freedoms and provoking iatrogenic genocide.

The false Microbial Theory, never proven but imposed without scientific debate for more than a century, is the basis of the dominant concept of health and therefore of the concept of public health that is used as a pretext throughout the world to violate fundamental rights and freedoms, and to provoke an iatrogenic genocide that will expand to pregnant women, children and young people if we do not stop it.

Partners in history
taking into account how relentless truth must be
I would like to ask
It urges me so much
What should I say?
What boundaries should I respect?

Silvio Rodríguez

How has it been possible that governments have trampled on and continue to ignore and flout all the fundamental rights that have been approved in most states around the world? How is it possible that a genocide is being perpetrated that began with the elderly, has spread to the entire population and is now going to concentrate on pregnant women, children and adolescents in an unprecedented assault on life? And even more astonishing: How is it possible that billions of people have accepted this without complaint and even applaud their executioners and jailers?

In my view, answering this requires addressing both a substantive and a more immediate issue: the substantive and long-term issue is the process of manufacturing obedient citizens, which in some articles I have called "idiots", the word by which the ancient Hellenes designated those who did not attend assemblies and left decisions in the hands of others. The immediate issue is the so-called Microbial Theory of Disease or Infection Theory. I have addressed the former in a number of recent articles, and although it will need further elaboration, I want to deal here with the latter.

It is not a question here of dismantling, disproving or refuting the Microbial Theory of Disease. Here we are going to start from its well-established falsehood in numerous works whose reading I recommend (see bibliography below) and from which it is clear and unquestionable that nobody has verified it and that it was not adopted after a scientific-medical debate, but was imposed for reasons of power.

What I would like to point out in this brief text are the consequences of the imposition of this theory, without claiming to be exhaustive but rather in a schematic way and with the intention of encouraging those who feel shaken by these words to go deeper, develop, contribute to and, in short, do their part in the fight against this key lie that plays such a crucial and nefarious role in the subjugation of people:

The EMR [electronic medical record system] has imposed a warmongering conception of biology whose flagship product is antibiotics, i.e. substances that block vital processes and kill microbes, which are the key to the origin and evolution of life and the maintenance of life itself.

Until the advent of Louis Pasteur, Robert Koch and other "microbe hunters", the vast majority of doctors treated their patients in an individual and personalised way; since the triumph of EMR, the minority of doctors maintaining this approach has diminished drastically; the vast majority work in an industrialised, i.e. dehumanised, way.

The concept of disease has been upended by EMR by blaming it primarily on microbes, thereby obscuring the link between living habits and conditions and health problems. As well as relieving us of responsibility for these problems, it encourages us to surrender to an industry-corrupted health care system that sells us false toxic remedies against the microscopic scapegoats that we blame.

EMR has thus imposed a concept of health based on the absence of disease, on false prevention consisting of training our supposed "defences" and on the extermination of the false culprits, all of which has very serious consequences on vital processes and thus generates a veritable explosion of iatrogenesis.

EMR thus makes it possible for the concept of public health to be based fundamentally on avoiding supposed contagions, which inevitably leads to coercive policies based on the isolation or confinement of people, control of movements, control of situations involving social contact, imposition of measures arbitrarily considered "hygienic" or, if necessary, the forcible imposition of treatments or supposedly preventive measures, mainly vaccination campaigns.

The imposition of the Microbial Theory is thus a key element in a process of developing health totalitarianism culminating in the current Operation Coronavirus which in turn has become in a traumatic and brutal way a kind of definitive reinforcement of the EMR itself and a strategy of eugenicist Power, unleashing an latroicide that may grow exponentially if we do not do something definitive to stop it.

This process has been marked by the invasion of medicine into vital fields that in principle do not correspond to it, and which encompass the entire arc of life and death, playing a key role in the production of obedient citizens: the medicalisation of pregnancy, childbirth and upbringing, and the separation of children, creating a trauma that perpetuates the state of unconscious submission that allows the exercise of Power.

Moreover, this process has been reinforced by the disregard for medical ethics, codes of ethics and bioethical agreements at all levels; the control that medical associations exercise over professionals by threatening or retaliating against those who decide to be honest and stand up to them; the omnipotent influence of the pharmaceutical industry, the scientific fundamentalism that corrodes true science; the corruption of scientific and medical institutions, with the WHO at the forefront; control and manipulation of information, both in the specialised scientific journals and in the censorship-ridden mass media; the total abandonment of responsibility and the autonomy of the ordinary citizen replaced by a blind faith in dogmas that he neither understands nor wants to understand in an abyss of dehumanisation that turns him into a schizoid being who fights against himself, obeys absurd orders and collaborates with a genocide programmed by the powers that be.

To deny is to say NO. To say NO is to disobey the YES of Power.

One denies in order to live. Power is death.

To protect our children and grandchildren is to protect life.

BASIC REFUSALIST PACK

Stefan Lanka. Articles on the Crown crisis and the dismantling of Virology (WissenschaftPlus).

Wilhelm Reich. Mass Psychology of Fascism (Roca, 1972).

Ryke Geerd Hamer. The Testament of the New Medicine (Plural-21).

Máximo Sandín. Pensando la Evolución, pensando la vida (Cauac, 2019).

Enric Costa Vercher. Iatrogenia. The Medicine of the Beast (Cauac, 2020).

Jesús García Blanca. La Sanidad contra la Salud (iediciones, 2015), Vacunas: una reflexión crítica (co-written with Enric Costa, iediciones, 2015), Wilhelm Reich, inspirador de rebeldía (Cauac, 2020).

Various authors. Discovery DSalud, issues 235, March 2020 to 250, July 2021 (for now).

Lluís Botinas. Call for appropriate action.